NEW DOGCART

It is with a great deal of satisfaction that we are able to announce those who have sent letters of complaint to this department regarding the equipment of the poundmaster that a truck has been secured and that animals picked up on the street can now ride to their doom in comfort.

It is a fitting announcement for Humane Week and one that will be received with joy by all of those who have objected to the equipment used in the past. But the less that is said about that, the better it is we suppose.

One other thing which we think would be fitting to take up during the week is a watering place in the down town district for an animal.

Since old Dobbin has been replaced by the gas buggy the old watering trough which used to be a regular sight on all business streets, is a thing of the past.

Dogs, however, lost in the change. They used to be able to go up to the watering trough and although many of them could not reach the water in the trough, they were able to catch some of the drippings from the overflowing or usually leaking receptacle to satisfy their thirst.

At the present time as far as we have been able to learn there is no place in the down town section, where a dog or other animal for that matter can find a drink.

It may be that when the new Memorial Fountain is built in Memorial Park, that facilities will be provided there for dogs to get a drink, but the chances are that a sign "no dogs allowed" will be placed in this park, as is the general rule.

It wouldn't cost much and it would certainly be a blessing to these dumb animals. We have seen any number of dogs running around on Macdonald avenue with their tongues hanging out.

Plans for Band Stand Discussed

Ernest Flores, architect for the new band stand that is planned to be erected at the Memorial hall park, met last night with the Richmond band, to look over the plans for the new stand. Nothing definite was accomplished at this meeting, but another meeting will be held at the City Hall on Monday night.

HALF MILLION MAKING LIQUOR SAYS ANDREWS, DRY LAW CZAR

1,700,000 Illicit Stills Are Making 70,000,000 Gallons Of Whiskey Daily

JOHN T. LAMBERT (By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, April 14.—General Lincoln C. Andrews, chief of the national prohibition forces, today declared that at least 500,000 people are directly engaged in the unlawful manufacture of hard liquor in this country.

He said the estimate was "possibly very low."

At least 1,700,000 illicit stills are in use, capable of producing nearly 70,000,000 gallons of whiskey a day, he declared.

He said that wholesale beer, distributed by the government, not to be drunk in public saloons, would be beneficial to the people, would reduce consumption of dangerous liquor and "most certainly" would be exceedingly helpful in law enforcement.

The grave extent to which moon-shining and bootlegging are now prevalent in homes is having a "very dangerous effect" upon public morals and is creating among mothers and children a class of law-breakers, harmful to the best interests of the country, he declared.

The admissions made by the man recently drafted into the public service to install the best enforcement possible under the prohibition law were at no time a voluntary attack by him upon the conditions which now exist.

They were the simple, frank answers made by him in response to the persistent, far-reaching questions flung at him in rapid succession by Senator "Jim" Reed of Maine, who was seated at Andrews' side.

Reed stood at the long mahogany committee on judiciary of the Senate and Andrews sat at a small table, his left hand in his coat pocket, his right hand occasionally pointing at Andrews as he fired searching questions after question at him.

General Andrews made it plain, however, that if beer were legalized its distribution and sale must be regulated by the government and it should not be drunk on the premises where sold.

"It would be disastrous—we would be gone," he declared. If beer were sold in public places like the saloons.

As to legalizing wine the general was uncertain, hazarding the opinion that wine is "intoxicating."

Andrews sat at ease in a chair across the table, always frank to give his replies "as man and official," frequently pausing to select clear, understandable words.

An audience jammed the room to capacity. Gray-haired, stern-lipped women, who will testify for prohibition shortly, heard the admissions fall from Andrews' lips in a tense atmosphere punctuated by Reed's sharp questions and Andrews' cool answers.

A five-gallon still captured by prohibition raiders was set up in the center of the room for demonstration purposes.

"Prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists now state that 9 percent of the liquor consumed is hard liquor. Isn't that fact that the largest consumption before prohibition was of beer?" General Andrews was asked.

"Yes," he replied, "and a good deal of hard liquor was drunk. I think about 165,000,000 gallons a year."

"Don't you think that a great many men would be glad to give up the kind of liquor they now drink for a beer of low alcoholic content?"

"I presume they would," said General Andrews. "Yes, I think a great many people would."

"Wouldn't it make it better for our people and easier for enforcement if the brewing were permitted of beer non-intoxicating in fact?"

"I will answer the question if you will describe the conditions," said General Andrews.

"What I mean is this," said Senator Reed. "Regulation by the government, not to be drunk in public places like the saloon, except with a meal in a good hotel."

"It probably would aid law enforcement," said General Andrews, "but the effort to control and distribute it would be vital."

"Suppose we include light wines, such as they have in France, Italy and used to make in California. Any Claret wine containing twelve percent of alcohol?"

"My opinion on that is uncertain," replied General Andrews. "Wine I think is intoxicating."

"What would happen if people could sell beer?" inquired Senator Harrell, a dry.

"We would be gone," said General Andrews.

"But if sold under regulation, not to be drunk upon the premises," Senator Reed insisted, "would it be helpful?"

"Yes," said General Andrews. "But you feel that if it was done in the saloon, the proprietor would have a chance to slip his customer some whiskey along with his beer?"

"It would be disastrous," said General Andrews.

"If sold publicly anywhere?" asked Senator Harrell.

"Yes," said General Andrews. "Now let us understand each other in order that we may get exactly what you mean," said Senator Reed.

Local People Attend Rites Of Burbank In Santa Rosa

Among the mourners at the funeral of the late Luther Burbank were Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Reynolds, of 711 Maple avenue of this city. Reynolds is now a city employee but for many years he was an employee of the Burbank family and a close friend of this man. The Reynolds family and were close friends.

Hundred of people were turned away and were unable to see the body but Reynolds and his family were given the honor of seeing Burbank as the hand of Death left him.

Reynolds described the beautiful memorial services and the impressive funeral rites.

"In the death of Burbank," Reynolds declared, "I lost the best friend that I have ever possessed."

CENSORSHIP OF FILMS IS ASKED IN MEASURES BEFORE HOUSE

Boosters of Bills Charge That One Third of Pictures Presented are Indecent

By ARTHUR HATCHER (By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Alleging that a third of the motion pictures now being produced present indecent dancing or other objectionable features, clergymen and members of congress launched a drive for Federal censorship of the film industry before the house education committee today.

Bills introduced by Upshaw (d) of Georgia, and Swagart (r), of Pennsylvania, formed the rallying ground.

The Upshaw Bill would give a federal board of five members, appointed by the president, authority to set up a standard of morals, license film producers and bar pictures that do not measure up to the board's standard.

"Thirty-three percent of the pictures now shown have indecent dancing and something must be done to purify the films," declared Rev. Dr. Clifford Gray Twombly of Lancaster, Pa.

Opposition to Federal Government "meddling in the film industry," was emphatically registered by Mrs. Thomas McGullick representing the international Catholic alumnae. She said:

"There is already too much Federal regulation of industry. Real Americans are becoming sick and tired of laws that attempt to regulate morals. The film industry is making clean and wholesome pictures."

"Will Hays has done all, I suppose, that the devil of monopoly would let him do to clean up the film industry," said Upshaw, adding:

"He was called from his position in the president's cabinet as an alibi for movie men."

"My bill is not for meticulous and meddling censorship of pictures already produced at heavy expense; it is intended to purify this great fountain of influence at its source."

"It is intended to make unnecessary the hindering restraints of municipal and state censorship boards."

"If it be stated that Federal control is objectionable on the ground of centralization, we answer that motion pictures are interstate in their operation."

"The motion picture business has proven itself ungrateful. Millions of dollars have gone into its coffers that used to go to saloons. Yet it is the custom of the screen to reflect in every possible way upon our prohibition law. Illicit drinking is thus encouraged."

Demonstration In Senate as Dry Law Is Being Debated

Vice-President Dawes Is Unable To Restore Order as Gallery Cheers Dry Senator

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, April 14.—A wild demonstration of handclapping and stamping of feet led by ardent women prohibitionists and bone dry senators broke loose in the senate galleries and on the floor today when the suggestion of civil war to maintain the 18th amendment was made in the midst of a fiery debate of the liquor question.

So great was the din that the vigorous hammering of the gavel by vice president Dawes sounded like faint taps. Dawes was red in the face from his strenuous efforts before the wave of enthusiasm passed and order was restored.

The frenzied outburst greeted a declaration by Senator Borah of Idaho in opposing modification of the Volstead act to legalize beer and wine as unconstitutional.

"I am one of those who believes that the constitution of the United States is of sufficient value, if it is necessary to trace our way through fire and blood to maintain it."

Borah's statement which apparently was interpreted by the gallery and dry senators as tantamount to a declaration of civil war on the liquor question was made in retort to Senator Bruce of Maryland a wet leader in a discussion of the constitutional issues that led to the civil war.

Borah declared that so long as the 18th amendment remained in the constitution "prohibition must be enforced and we must find means of enforcing it instead of planning to secrete out means of evading the constitution by ignoring it in spirit or letter."

As one report came in, the police rushed to the scene only to find that the woman had been there and left. Another report would locate her blocks from the first one. FINAL RITES FOR BURBANK ARE ATTENDED BY MULTITUDE

Judge Ben Lindsey and Other National Figures at Rites Honor Great Plant Scientist

(By Universal Service)

SANTA ROSA, April 14.—Luther Burbank sleeps tonight under the towering two sided Cedar of Lebanon he planted in his Santa Rosa Garden 35 years ago.

Just as the golden California poppy closed their shining cups for their evening sleep, Luther Burbank went into the rich soil of his beloved garden for his sleep of eternity.

Sunset had come when his aged retainer, his gardener, gently dropped the soil under which he sleeps.

The funeral of the great Santa Rosa plant scientist perhaps has no parallel in American history. Long before the hour for memorial services in Doyle Park, just north and east of the Burbank gardens, all roads to the city were thronged with men and women of high and low estate come to pay homage to the man who had been born and loved at the birth of their land.

When Judge Ben Lindsey, of Denver, Colorado, friend of Burbank, arose on the honored platform under a giant gnarled oak to speak the eulogy that Burbank had asked 10,000 men, women, and children stood before him.

Judge Lindsey related how the promise was made that he would speak at Burbank's funeral.

"It was great comfort to me I have ever had," he said "Burbank came from

THE UNIVERSAL DRAFT

All of the men who were sent by their country to serve in France at a pittance to whip the Hun and who came back to find the country enjoying a protected prosperity out of which more peacefully inclined citizens were reaping a harvest of big pay and small peril, will be in the notion to approve at first glance the bill for creating a drastic general draft machine. This bill has been introduced in the house by Congressman Johnson of South Dakota, and is designed to level all humps of fortune for the citizenry involved in a future war.

The big item in the bill is the declaration that industrial exemptions are "out" as far as future drafts are concerned. It was the selection of some 100,000 because of their reputed value to industry that galloped the soldiers in 1917. Too many who served and still are serving in hospitals and on home treatment, have come to realize just what the full implication clause amounted to in favoritism.

The Johnson bill is short and very sweet—to ex-service men, but not so sweet to the whole range of individuals. Its provisions are:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that in the event of war declared by Congress to exist which in the judgment of the President demands the immediate increase of the Military Establishment, the President be, and he hereby is, authorized to draft into the service of the United States such members of the unorganized militia as he may deem necessary: Provided, that all persons drafted into service between the ages of twenty-one and thirty, or such other limits as the President may fix, shall be drafted without exemption on account of industrial occupation.

Sec. 2. That in case of war, or when the President shall judge the same to be imminent, he is authorized and it shall be his duty when in his opinion, such emergency requires it—

(a) To determine and proclaim the martial resources, industrial organizations, and services over which government control is necessary to the successful termination of such emergency, and such control shall be exercised by him through agencies then existing or which he may create for such purposes;

(b) To take such steps as may be necessary to stabilize prices of services and of all commodities declared to be essential, whether such services and commodities are required by the government or by the civilian population.

The bad taste of Senator St. Charles in his reply to an invitation to take part in a Colorado River debate is small compared with that of the Courier in accepting his letter for publication without first consulting the Prescott Teachers Association. But this community is, or should be, hardened by now to that manifestation.

The last sunspot storm was the best of all. We care not what is in the chemical make-up of Old Sol, or what makes him tick, so long as he sends us streams of electrical impulses in the nick of time to break our southwestern droughts.

Anemia does not seem to be a possible ailment of a man of 63 whose ardor for a 26-year old stenographer, even if pretty, could cause him to become the speculator of $40,000 in two years. There is something wrong with the theory of what makes a sweet daddy sweet.

Some Pages from American History

By VICTOR MORGAN

THE BATTLE OF BUNKER HILL

Col. Washington came to the fore. He wore the provincial uniform to the Congress, and from the first to the last his services were that of a soldier. He was constantly consulted on questions of military preparation, the protection of the frontier against the Indians, the organization of a continental force, the management of a commissariat, the gathering of munitions, proper means of equipment, or feasible plans of fortification.

On the motion of John Adams, the Congress chose Col. Washington commander-in-chief of the American forces, and he was placed in command of the field at Boston.

Two days later the British and the provincials fought the bloody and stubborn battle at Bunker Hill.

Just prior to this General Gage had received heavy reinforcements from England and his force numbered more than eight thousand men. Three experienced general officers also were added to his

The British saw very well that their position in Boston could be effectively commanded to the north and south by cannon placed upon the heights of Charlestown or Dorchester, so they determined to occupy Charlestown heights at once, the nearer and more threatening position.

They started work on trenches and redoubts at midnight, but they worked so leisurely that the early morning light disclosed their plans to the provincials.

The British did not stop to use indirect approach, but at once sent three thousand men straight across the water to take the hill by direct assault.

The colonials were outnumbered, but they retired only because their powder gave out, not their courage or steadfastness.

But the British lost a thousand men, and they were not eager to take another entrenched position from men who held their fire until the enemy were within a few score yards of them and then volleyed with definite and deadly aim.

LESSON IN HOME DRESSMAKING

A Negligee Originated for Service, with All of the Charm of More Formal Modes

MUCH of the smartness of the new leisure fashions is based on modes for general wear. For instance, what could be more delightful than a negligee in soft wool crepe trimmed with frilled ribbon? The long-waisted upper section fastens in surplice effect, and the circular flounce flares with the movement that Paris declares essential to all ultra-chic creations.

Ribbon trims the slashed kimono sleeves, and a string-tie of velvet is used for the fastening. Medium size requires 4 1/2 yards 36-inch material, with 22 yards of narrow ribbon for trimming. One may, of course, substitute plain lace insertion or any other trimming for the ribbon.

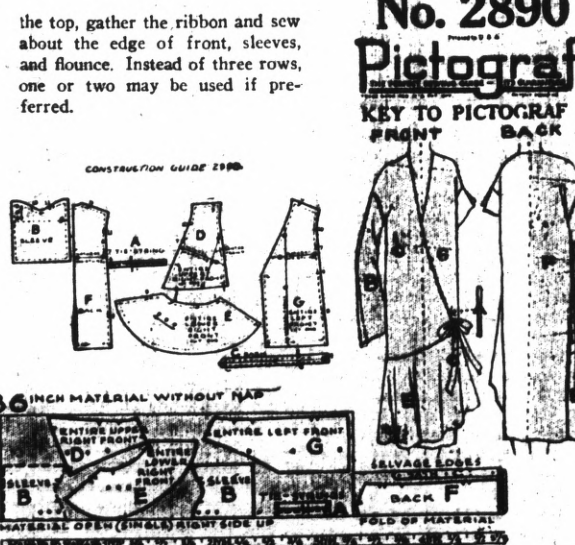

Because of the irregular shape, only the back of the negligee can be cut on a lengthwise fold of the goods. The remaining sections are laid on the crepe laid open on the cutting table, right side up.

Mark all notches and perforations carefully, then join right sections D and E, with front and underarm edges even. Arrange ribbon in position, tacking one end to top of flounce and the other to the underarm seam. Close underarm seams of negligee, leaving edges free above medium perforations in back F. Close shoulder seams. Sew sleeves in armholes, and bind slashed edges.

As most of the ribbon used for trimming purposes may be gathered by drawing a thread through

FROCK OF RARE CHIC

For crepe satin or chiffon velvet, this design is especially suited, as it is slightly molded to the figure and features the smart flare at the sides. The panel front and back are emphasized by the clever shaping of the side sections of the dress which are cut in one with the flare. A youthfully cut standing collar finishes the oval neckline. Medium size requires 4 1/2 yards 40-inch material.

SYNOPSIS

Clifford Dudley, matinee idol, receives his beloved while "tearing the sticks" by flirting with a remarkably pretty country girl, Marie Downey. As innocent as pretty Marie thinks that because Clifford kissed her they have thus become engaged, and naively runs away from home and follows him on the train to New York. Realizing the seriousness of the matter, Clifford desperately turns for help to his hard-boiled bodyguard, who takes the unsophisticated Marie under her wing, but with misgivings for her future.

CHAPTER III—(Continued)

"Well—well—he kissed me—quite a lot—and said he loved me—and—asked would I be his little girl."

"Exactly," said Sally.

"However," she added internally, "that's not my business. Clifford's got to get out of that by himself, and, believe me, he can do it, too."

In spite of herself, however, she formed a sentence of doubt to this silly and unfeeling child. But, looking at Marie's face, from which the fright had gone now, leaving a happy and wistfully excited, a thrill of these actresses, a train ride with New York as the objective, and Clifford in the same car, remorse smote her, and she was quiet.

She veered off on a new tack.

"Don't you think your father will be very unhappy to find you're gone?"

Marie's face clouded, but only for an instant.

"Oh, but I left a note for him, and I told dad I was coming back. It won't be long, you know. When Clifford and I—are—married, I'll go back for a visit."

"You are you oughtn't to go home?" Sally searched her face

CHAPTER IV

"I see," said Sally Short casually, putting out her last after-dinner cigarette. "That our friend, the Great Lover, has made another bit. The luck of that guy!"

She and Marie, now ensconced with seeming permanency in Sally's apartment in the West Forties, were sitting over the remains of an early kitchenette dinner. It was two months since Marie had so fortunately been gathered under Sally's protective wing on the train from Vinesville. Two months of intimate association with Marie, living together, sharing kitchenette meals together, making a tour of the agencies and managers together and together making light of disappointments, had welded Sally's pitying interest into a firm affection. This affection was so entrenched that, on being offered the role of a minor principal in a revue called "Pretty Polly," Sally had clung to the manager like a clinging vine to its victim until he took on her buddy, Marie, as a chorus girl.

It had not been very difficult, to be sure, after the manager saw Marie. But as little country girl, without experience, Sally often felt a shadow of annoyance cross her friendship that Marie should not seem to be amazed by her astounding luck. Even if "Pretty Polly" was staggeringly big money, precariously as a drunken man down a flight of steps, never knowing which night might see the closing notice posted on the bulletin board, still it was not every country girl by a long shot who, so soon after a penniless entry into New York, was a friend, a home built securely on Sally's alimony checks, and, such as it was, a job.

Sometimes, when Marie hung over the silent telephone after a noon in the vague hope of a call from Clifford, sometimes when Marie tearfully excused his obvious delinquency by his preoccupation with rehearsing his preoccupation new show, sometimes watching Marie sit up after the show to compose plaintive little notes—which were never answered—to Clifford, Sally put her down as a "plain sap."

And yet Clifford did call her up very occasionally, on the advice of the astute Sally, guessed, of his manager, who feared an unpleasant bit of publicity if a poor little country girl, following her idol under which she considered promises of marriage, should have a plea to the courts and via the courts, to the papers. Sally was right. Mr. Dugan's advice to his client, after a succinct review of Clifford's bothersome amours, had been just that: "To string her along until she gets wise, and if she makes a holler—then—well see. She has no letters anyway. But that Sally and she lives with is a pretty wise baby!"

Often Sally had been on the point of giving Marie a heart-to-heart lecture. But watching Marie wilt over letters from home, which Sally guessed to be final renunciations on the part of her father and that little boy friend in the background, of whom she had learned, Sally's sharp tongue clove to her mouth.

REDUCED FERRY RATES GO INTO EFFECT TODAY

Urging the citizens of Richmond to cooperate with the Southern Pacific company in bringing more traffic to the city, the directors of the Chamber of Commerce at their meeting yesterday called attention to the new reduced rates on the Richmond-San Francisco ferry, which goes into effect today. P. M. Sanford declared that while the company is advertising the new rates of sixty cents a trip, that the people should help to increase the service by availing themselves of the new schedule of rates.

A report on the negotiations between the city and the Parr Terminal company of Oakland, concerning a lease of the harbor was made by City Manager James A. McVittie. He declared that details of the negotiations between the city and the terminal company were being worked out.

The secretary was instructed to forward a letter of respects and condolence to the family of the late City Attorney D. J. Hall on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce.

Eye is Seriously Injured When Struck by Pebble

Mrs. Louise Huff, of Oakland, narrowly escaped losing her eyesight and possible other injuries Tuesday afternoon when a pebble thrown by a group of small boys hit her eye glasses while she was driving her car in North Richmond.

Her glasses were shattered by the stone and when she tried to protect herself, she lost control of the automobile which careened toward the curb. But that she was traveling at a low rate of speed and that the car was stopped when it struck the curb, she would have received serious injuries. The crowd of boys disappeared quickly.

Modern Girl Interested In Home Building and Housekeeping

Pessimists who in fiction and other mediums portray the girl of today as interested chiefly in unwholesome excitement are all wrong, according to the group of experts who have been securing co-operation of schools and colleges in the better homes movement. Miss 1926 expects to have a home and wants to know how to keep it efficient and attractive.

The lower picture shows the two "home management" houses at the University of Minnesota, at St. Paul. Both of these were planned and erected by the University in 1923. One house is a frame one, the other stucco. The same plan was followed in building both houses, each containing seven bedrooms, a kitchen, a laundry and two baths. A group of students and an instructor live in each house. The houses are located on the edge of the University campus.

Better Homes in America, a non-commercial educational organization headed by Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, is deeply interested in furthering the school practice house and home economics cottage movements among the schools and colleges of the country. AGED INVENTOR WINS BIG SUIT

(By Universal Service)

SEATTLE, April 14.—Federal Judge Jeremiah Neterer late today signed an interlocutory decree awarding to George Campbell Carson, aged San Francisco inventor, all the profits realized from the illegal use of Carson's copper reduction process patents by the American Smelting & Refining company of Tacoma which has infringed upon Carson's patent rights.

As a result of the decree, it is estimated that Carson will come into possession of at least $200,000.

Judge Neterer appointed Hon. Overton G. Ellis, former Tacoma Judge, as a special master in chancery to conduct a series of hearings to fix the exact amount of the claim against the company.

Ellis findings will be subject to review by Federal Court, at an on line hearing on a date to be fixed after the master reports.

IRENE RICH IS STAR IN FILM AT CALIFORNIA

One of the most difficult feats attempted in the history of motion pictures has been most successfully accomplished. That is the transfer of "Lady Windermere's Fan" to the screen, which Ernest Lubitsch has brilliantly done for Warner Bros. The film version of this Oscar Wilde play which opened yesterday at the California theatre is a visible proof that the wit and sparkling epigrams of Wilde may be translated into action, if this master director is at the helm.

"Lady Windermere's Fan" has, above everything else, the perfect cast. It is thanks to the skill of Lubitsch, the genius of the screen, that Irene Rich blossoms into a Mrs. Erlynne, so superbly beautiful and so delightful a sophisticated siren that the memory of her as a deserted wife fades into oblivion. Mrs. Rich has surpassed anything she has ever done, successful though her career has been with the characterization of Mrs. Erlynne.

My McAvoy, fresh, youthfully poised and aristocratically haughty is a delight as Lady Windermere whose love for her husband survives even jealousy and suspicion.

Ronald Colman, who through the courtesy of Samuel Goldwyn, appears as Lord Darlington, is more than ever the ardent, irresistible wooer of fair ladies. Colman's appeal to the weaker sex continues as strong as it did since his debut in "The White Sister."

Bert Lyell as Lord Windermere, Edward Martindel as the susceptible Lord Augustus, and Helen Dunbar, Cassie Daumery and Billie Bennett as the three duchesses give finely finished performances.

Julien Josephson adapted "Lady Windermere's Fan" and so carefully and adroitly has this task been done, that the story of a mother's sacrifice for her daughter is as powerful and freshly fascinating as when it was produced on the stage some thirty years ago.

Other features include "Charley My Boy," a Charley Chase comedy; "Ke Ke Song Car-Tune," "Swanee River," the screen magazine.

IT'S NO DODGE.

Like a million and one other girls of the same age, Jenny Hagen, waitress in a little middle west town on the Ohio, dreams of the days when her name will blaze forth in bright lights in theatre lobbies the country over. To that end she is taking a correspondence school course in acting the course, however, being more to make an impression on one Orme Wilson, who also works in the restaurant, than anything else.

So we find Gloria Swanson at the Richmond theatre today, in her newest Paramount starring picture, "Stage Struck," an Allan Dwan production of an original screen story.

Forrest Halsey wrote the screen play, Lawrence Gray, as Orme Wilson; Ford Sterling, in the role of the manager of the river theatre; Gertrude Astor, the actress, and Carrie Scott head the cast.

Another Outbreak Is Anticipated In Herrin, Ill.

(By Universal Service)
HERRIN, Ill., April 14.—Six dead men will be laid in their graves tomorrow, soldiers will stand guard for a day or two and then Herrin will settle back and wait until "next time."

Scenes of men in Herrin today expressed the belief that another outbreak of warfare between the Ku Klux Klan and the anti-klan that yesterday resulted in the slaying of three klanmen and three anti-klanmen and the wounding of nearly a score of others will come. Quiet prevailed today. The military authorities that rushed two companies of state militia here late yesterday after the klan and anti-klan had fought their battles about the streets where a primary election was in progress felt confident there would be no further trouble immediately. The warring factions will wait until the soldiers have been disbanded and the precautions against barking dogs abandoned. Then anything may happen at any time.

There was talk of an investigation today, but it didn't mean much. One man was arrested, charged with violating a traffic ordinance. He was later released. A coroner's jury was expected to pass upon the death of the six men who went down before blazing guns yesterday evening. Herrin has heard the report of coroner's juries before. Blame usually rests on the dead and a dead man can't be prosecuted.

It cannot be said that Herrin lives in fear. But the spirit of uneasiness is never absent; neighbor watches neighbor, eyes ready to catch the glint of a pistol, ears primed to note the direction of the first shot, and hand ready for the hip-pocket pistol.

Eight times in four years the militia has come to Herrin to restore order. Nothing ever happens while the soldiers are here. It happens before they come and after they have gone.

It happened yesterday when John Smith, garage owner, and local leader, said to have challenged the right of an anti-klanman to vote in the primary. The anti-klan retaliated by attacking Smith and his friends at his garage. Three of four hundred shots were fired but only one man was wounded.

Later in the day two automobiles loaded with men said to have been anti-klanmen drove up to a polling place at the Masonic Temple, opened fire on a number of klanmen standing on the sidewalk and fled. It was here that three klanmen and three anti-klanmen were slain.

Fourteen persons had been slain in klan and anti-klan warfare in Herrin previous to yesterday's battle, and in 1922 more than twenty non-union coal miners were slain during an attack by union sympathizers.

Los Angeles On A Test Flight

LAKEHURST, April 15.—The giant dirigible Los Angeles flew up the Atlantic coast over Asbury Park and Ocean Grove and returned to her hangar where she was housed for the night.

The flight lasted for two and one half hours and the ship is said to have behaved perfectly. Another flight may be made tomorrow.

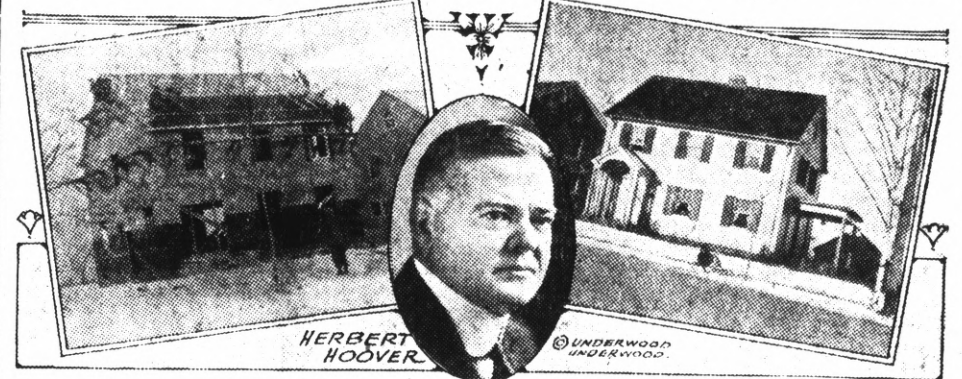

While they are confident, however, that the warring factions could be brought together, as is the habit in Republican circles when an election is in sight.

Some, however, are insisting on telling the whole world where Illinois stood in the primary, and taking a stand as did Lovejoy and the leaders of old on the slavery question behind Abraham Lincoln, regardless of whether it sets well with the G. O. P. chieftains at Washington.

But while Coy Smith is having his troubles over the party pronouncement, Brennan, who aspires to the seat in the United States Senate as a "dripping wet," will also have to cut the pretty sharp corners to avoid a bitter row in his convention.

While he is determined to limit his party pronouncement to a demand for repeal or modification of the Volstead law, scores of Democratic delegates will come to the convention from southern Illinois counties where the dryness outdoes the Sahara.

Boy-Built House at Utica Typical of New Tendency In Better Homes Work as 1926 Climax Approaches

Concentration on the enlistment of schools and special attention to the erection and maintenance of permanent home information centers are the outstanding features of the fifth year of educational work by Better Homes in America, culminating for 1926 in the annual Better Homes Week, April 25 to May 1. A complete survey of school practice houses has just been completed by specialists from the Washington headquarters of the organization.

Better Homes in America is a non-commercial organization headed by Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, as president, and Dr. James Ford of Harvard University as Executive Director. Committees in more than 3,000 communities will co-operate this year by organizing local educational campaigns for the improvement of housing and home life.

An aim of the Better Homes movement upon which special emphasis is being laid this year is the encouragement of "boy-built" houses—houses actually constructed by the pupils of vocational classes, which in many cases have the permanent value of being school practice houses or home information centers for the entire community.

A "boy-built" house at Utica, where four such houses have been built, put up by the boys of the vocational classes of the school, is shown in the picture above.

In this work other vocational students are, as a general rule, given the opportunity to co-operate with the carpentry classes. Architectural Drafting classes draw up the plans which are checked and corrected, if necessary, by specialists, and the plans are given to the carpentry classes for the making of material estimates before work is begun.

Senator McKinley's attitude follows: "Senator McKinley is the first of the millionaire senators who voted to steal my seat and give it to a Daugherty Democrat, to come before the people for approval."

"He made a horrible example of me in speeches and in circulars all over the state. His constituents sent many of them to me with comments of disapproval. 'He voted,' or rather paired against me without any knowledge of the merits of the contest and took the word of a bi-Partisan sub-committee that was against me from the start."

"He made speeches for the farmer vote but opposed me and every other senator who really wanted to do something for agriculture."

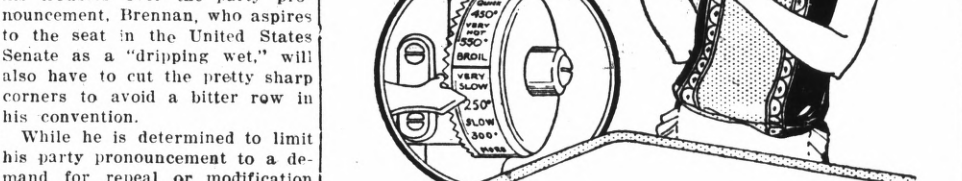

"On this and a World Court record he went before the people and it will not require a Senate committee to investigate his seat."

"I can only construe this as in some degree a vindication for me from the voters of Illinois."

"There are some other reasons why McKinley and his kind want a Daugherty Democrat in the Senate, but that probably will appear later."

Riviera Light And Climate No Match for Calif.

(By Universal Service)
NICE, April 14.—Hollywood's film supremacy will receive no serious challenge from the French Riviera, according to movie experts who have closely followed Rex Ingram's experiments in producing at Nice. Neither the famous Riviera sunlight nor climate is as suitable for pictures as the light and weather of Southern California.

Rex Ingram chose to experiment with Nice to film a book by Blasco Ibanez. The manuscript called for crowds of Spanish, French and Italians. The principal scenes were laid in Barcelona, Marseilles and Naples. Proper types were found without any trouble. But American producers point out that it might be difficult to secure suitable crowds for important pictures, if the background were other than a Latin country.

The American production was subject to a number of annoyances costing time and money, which they would have been saved in Hollywood. The glassed-in studio was insufferably hot in summer, and cold and drafty in the winter. During the summer months, because of the heat, much of the work was done by artificial light after sundown.

Pneumonia laid up some of the stars in the winter, in the midst of the work. One of the actors died of double pneumonia. It was almost impossible to keep the drafty studio warm. The Americans found it difficult to borrow or rent antique furniture for use in the pictures. Riviera antique dealers were extremely suspicious of the film company, and declined to cooperate.

The studio which has been constructed outside of Nice, is said to be up-to-date and modern in every way. Its grounds are sufficiently spacious to permit the filming of the most elaborate productions. But the Hollywood climate and lighting are absent, and American producers who have looked over the situation carefully have no fears of Riviera competition.

Gen. Pershing Back at War Department Desk After Rest in Hospital

The War Department turned out on masse to welcome back Gen. John J. Pershing. When he was freed by ill health to abandon his Tacna-Artic plebiscite mission and return from South America, he went to the Walter Reed hospital in Washington for treatment and rest. Evidently his hospital sojourn did him good.

Commander E. C. White, under whose care Gen. Butler was admitted to the naval hospital here after he had filed the "cocktail" charges told in detail of the examination he made.

"We made the usual physical examinations and laboratory tests and the results were generally negative," the navy physician said.

"Gen. Butler was suffering from nervous and physical exhaustion the vision of the left eye was very low, but the right eye was normal."

Lt. John E. Henry, naval hospital Prologist, told of having had Col. Williams under treatment for an organic disorder since last January. The affected condition he said, had been first discovered in 1911.

He described a drug he prescribed for the Colonel and of the ill effects full doses produced when treatment was begun. "What is the likely effect of this drug upon patients, according to your observations?" he was asked. "It produces gastritis, Nausea, sick stomach and vomiting, bel-

Wife Says Spouse had Auction Complex

(By Universal Service)
SAN FRANCISCO, April 14.—Mrs. Aldanita Dietrich, wife of Charles R. Dietrich, state insurance commissioner, testified today in her divorce action, that her husband suffered from an auction complex.

"He never had money to pay the grocer or the butcher, but he always had sufficient funds to haunt the auction houses and purchase porcelain objects of art and other indigestible articles," testified Mrs. Dietrich. "Whenever I asked him for money to pay the household bills, he was always broke."

"His telephone number was on file with dozens of auction houses. They would call him when they had obtained a desirable knick knack and he would always find the money to pay for that."

Mrs. Dietrich, formerly Miss Aldanita Wolfkill, is a member of a pioneer family that settled in Winters, Solano county in 1842.

Ann, eat your breakfast

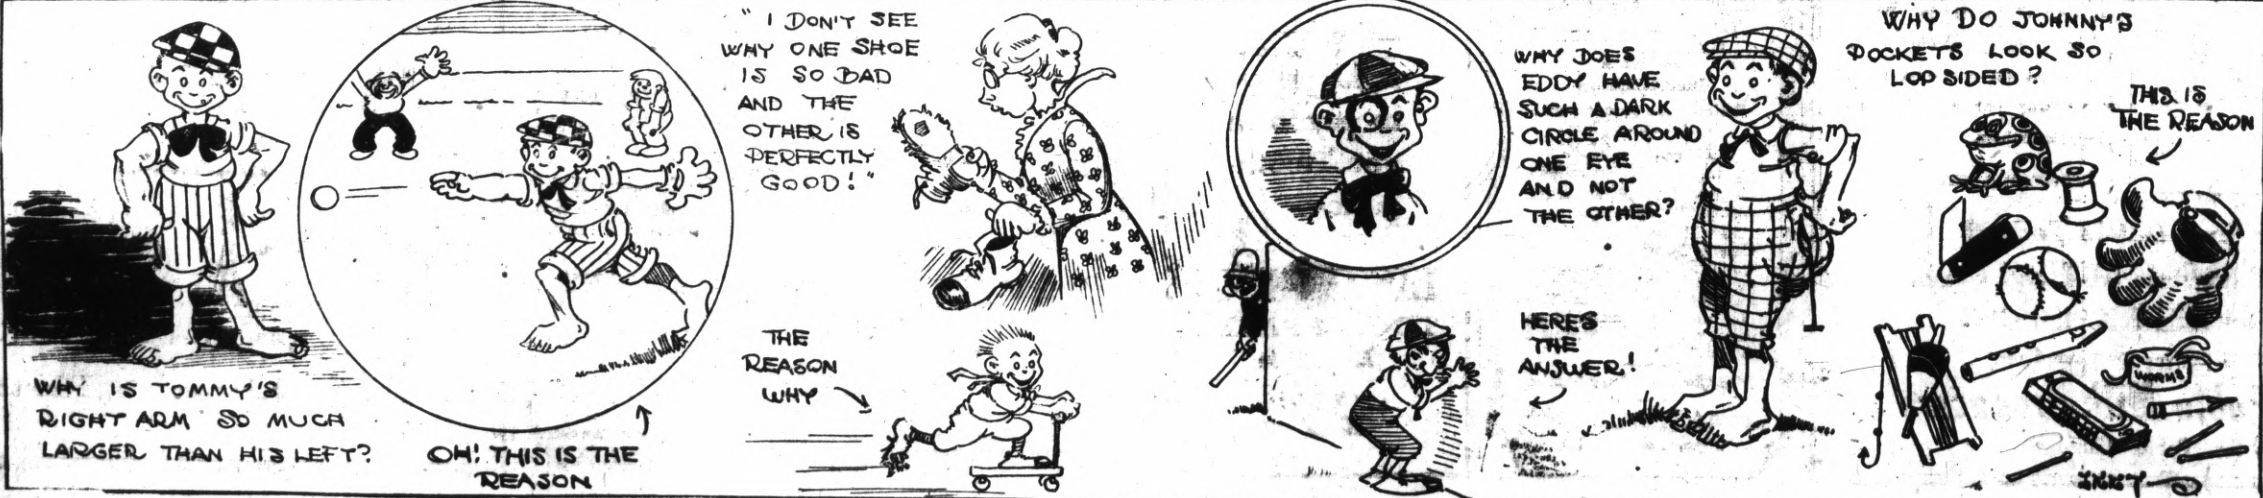

HERE'S cream taken from a bottle, and breakfast food got out of a box. I haven't tasted them yet, but I'm not afraid to ask you to eat. And in the bathroom is new tooth-paste to use on your teeth. Here's medicine to take before you start off to school... Don't forget to wash your hands—that's a fresh bar of soap—and maybe dust your face with powder. No, it won't hurt the skin. This list of things I've seen advertised—stop and give it to your father. He'll bring them home tonight. Some of them old, some of them new... but what a civilized thing! To buy on faith and use on faith and never be betrayed!

Read the advertisements. Their honesty is as clear as a mirror. You can believe in them as surely as you believe in yourself. You can follow their directions with utmost faith. You can use their products with confidence you'll want to use them again. Theirs are facts proved and accepted. Use their news.

HEEDED MOTHER'S ADVICE

Oakland, Cal., Feb. 26, 1926.
For more than a year I suffered from hemorrhage from a tumor. During this time I was treated by several physicians, all of whom agreed that an operation was the only thing that could help me. Neither my husband nor I liked the idea of the knife.
Upon the advice of my mother who, after having an operation on the right side, the wound forming a fistula which had never healed for 14 years, had found complete relief and fistula healed by drinking the Fong Wan Herbs, I decided to try them. Owing to my terrible condition and my extremely poor health, I took about six months before I was entirely well. I am now in splendid health and my old trouble have been completely vanquished.
I formerly lived at 1805 Howard street, San Francisco, but have recently removed to Oakland. My phone number is Market 6550.

Gall Bladder Troubles Gone!

To Whom It May Concern:
For over a year I had trouble in my gall bladder, pain on my right side, vomiting and a general rundown condition. On February 23rd of this year I had an attack of appendicitis, the pain of which was so severe that I could not sleep at night. I came to see the Chew & Chew Herbs and after taking one dose of herbs I was greatly relieved. I continued to take the herbs for a few more weeks and I am all well now. March 14, 1926.

ALCOHOLISM IS ON INCREASE DOCTOR STATES

Prohibition Division (By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Alcoholism has rapidly and steadily increased under prohibition. Lethal poisoning and alcoholic blindness were on the upgrade until bootleggers learned how to make their concoctions less dangerous according to evidence submitted to the wet and dry hearing today from Dr. William H. Robt. Senior visiting physician of the Boston city hospital.

The hospital is one of the biggest in the northwest. Dr. Robt. said in a deposition read to the senate committee that Captain Driscoll of the police precinct in which the hospital is situated said that of the 10,000 arrests made last year, 65 per cent were of alcoholism or violation of the liquor laws.

"We are asking that our quarters to alcoholic patients be enlarged," said Dr. Robt. "The police bring only those to the hospital who can't be aroused from their stupor."

"Lethal poisoning and alcoholic blindness, steadily on the increase, have been reduced some now because the bootleggers have learned to make a less dangerous mixture."

"We had to establish a separate ward because 25 per cent of our patients were straight alcoholic patients. Ex-Mayor Curley considered at one time the establishment of a hospital for treatment of alcoholic patients only, the need became so great."

Jebanna E. Sweeney, register of the hospital, sent the committee the following record of total hospital admissions and of alcoholic patients, showing how alcoholic patients decreased at first under prohibition and then suddenly increased:

Year	Whole Number of Patients Admitted	Alcoholic Patients
1915	15,468	487
1916	17,000	1,000
1917	17,500	1,153
1918	16,873	540
1919	15,500	561
1920	14,489	643
1921	16,800	1,295
1922	19,952	2,226
1923	20,600	2,323
1924	21,409	1,972
1925	18,972	2,003

The experience of the public and private homes for treatment of inebriates shows beyond any doubt that dangerous alcoholism has increased in this country as the result of prohibition. According to Dr. Hugh Brown Gray, superintendent of the Washingtonian Home for Inebriates, at Boston, in a letter today to the Senate Judiciary committee.

The home, instituted in 1841, is perhaps the oldest institution of its kind in the United States. Admission of alcoholic patients increased from about 400 in 1900 to about 600 at the time prohibition became effective. In 1925 last year, Dr. Gray said, "Through conversations with the patients, relatives and friends," wrote Dr. Gray, "I do not hesitate to say that from the residential district to the factory town, prohibition is causing damage."

HUBBY NOT TO MARRY ACTRESS SAYS HIS WIFE

(By Universal Service)

CHICAGO, April 14.—Peggy Archibald Hopkins Joyce Morner, that much married and much divorced stage beauty may not get to carry out her plans for her fifth marital venture.

This was disclosed today when Mrs. Stanford E. Comstock declared that she was still the wife of Comstock, Peggy's prospective husband.

"Mr. Comstock and I are not divorced," Mrs. Comstock said here today. "That's about all I care to say about the matter, except that if he attempts to issue any denial of any statement or to say anything that will reflect on me, he will get a snappy comeback."

Mrs. Comstock, who has remained in Chicago while her husband was making money in Florida declared that he obtained his Florida divorce illegally. She cited the fact that he declared he had been a resident of the state for two years, when in reality he had been there only a month.

She also pointed out that he charged desertion in his complaint. She denied that she had ever deserted him.

"Why since he obtained that divorce, I have lived with him as his wife," she declares. "We were registered at the Roosevelt hotel in New York as man and wife three weeks ago. He called Peggy Joyce on the phone while in my presence and made an appointment with her to meet her at Tex Guinan's night club."

"I spent all last winter with Mr. Comstock in Florida," Mrs. Comstock declared that she was once divorced from the realtor, but that she had remarried him.

The woman's sister at Detroit declared that Mrs. Comstock had not divorced her husband nor had

Mrs. Comstock, a very pretty woman, elegantly dressed, and with the poise of a very cultured individual, received reporters who called at her home and told them her story.
